

FLICKS HIS CIGAR AT $500,000,000

Boarding House Lodger Yawns Over Castles in Ancient Wales.

"ME, HEIR?" HE SAYS:
"I NEVER USE DOPE"

Descendant of Sir John Wynn Refuses to Get Excited When Told of Claim to Wealth.

Wales is divided into three parts—that part which is under water, that part which is England and that part which belongs to a thin, slightly bald young man who lives on the second floor back of a brownstone structure of Two Twenty-third Street's "boarding house."

"Mr. Giegler," called the housekeeper No. 22 yesterday, "there's a gentleman down here to see you. He says it's very important."

From the top hallway floated J.
Giegler's sleepy voice. "Coming," he called down. "What time is it?"

"Two o'clock."

"In the morning?"

"No, afternoon, Mr. Giegler."

Half an hour later he clumped down the carpeted stairs, a cigar in his mouth.

Takes Millions as a Joke.

"Mr. Giegler," began the stranger,
"you are the heir to millions."

"Quit your kidding," he said. "Gee! he told here."

"Mr. Giegler," came the insistent information, "you are the heir to millions."

"I never use dope," replied J. Oliver Giegler. "Who left me the money?"

Into Mr. Giegler's hand was thrust a blue-tinted postal card, addressed to The Tribune and signed by Edward S.
Fox, manager of the Mutual Secret Association of Detectives, of Cleveland.
It read:

"J. O. Giegler, of 227 West Twenty-third Street, has fallen heir to many millions of dollars. Send reporter to see him for full particulars."

Giegler calmly handed back the card.
"Doesn't this surprise you?" he was asked.

"I've been expecting something of the sort," replied Mr. Giegler. He dipped the ashes from his cigar. "Fox has written me about the same thing.
It all goes back to Sir John Wynn, who was a somebody back in Wales. I'm related to him. He left an estate worth $500,000,000."

"Who has it now?"

"It's being held in trust by the English Court of Chancery. Most of it is land in Wales. Did you ever play ball?"

"Not much."

"I did. Rotten weather we're having, ain't it?"

Wynn's Form Organization.

J. Oliver Giegler extracted a number of telegrams, clippings and letters from a well worn wallet.

"Sixty members of the Wynn family met in convention in Marion, Ohio, a few months ago," he volunteered.
"They came to decide who was to get the money from the estate. They also organized the Wynn Genealogical Historical Society, Incorporated."

"How are you related to Sir John Wynn?"

Mr. Giegler replied by tracing the Wynn genealogy on his fingers. His mother, he said, was a direct descendant of Sir John Wynn. In fact, he had written her yesterday morning not to be surprised in case he were announced heir to a fortune.

"What'll you do with the money?" he was asked.

"Get a drink first," he replied. "Then I'd chuck up my job as solicitor. Then I'll start a factory and share my money with my employees, like Henry Ford.
Say, pinch me, will you? Are you sure I'm not dreaming?"

"Get a drink first," he replied. "Then I'd chuck up my job as solicitor. Then
I'll start a factory and share my money
with my employees, like Henry Ford.

SET BOMB GUARD IN RIVER TUBES

Police Patrol Entrances to Prevent Dynamite Plot
by Strikers.

BLAST WOULD COST
LIVES OF WORKERS

Employers Ready to Quit Compromise Plan and Fight Subway Diggers.

Fearing that some over-ardent striker may try to further his hope of higher wages by dynamiting the two subway tubes under construction beneath the East River, the Flinn-O'Rourke Construction Company has asked the police to guard all entrances to these tunnels. Accordingly, eight patrolmen are stationed night and day at all openings to prevent the possible introduction of a bomb, which would flood the tubes and cause the death of the few men remaining in them.

The workers of the Flinn-O'Rourke Company struck on Friday. Police last night said that there had been no attempt to damage the work. The tunnels under construction are to run from Old Slip to Clark Street, Brooklyn, and from Whitehall Street to Montague Street, Brooklyn.

The company alleges that by striking the workers have violated an iron-clad contract, entered into before the beginning of the tubes. A copy of the contract has been forwarded to the American Federation of Labor, with an appeal to that body. In it appears this clause:

"The employees agree with the contractor that during the entire time necessary to complete this tunnel, the scale of wages to be paid the employees by the contractor shall be as follows:"

Then follows a scale of wages which the Flinn-O'Rourke concern insists has been strictly adhered to.

In a statement issued after a meeting of subway contractors yesterday, it was said that the employers had made their last effort to come to terms with the strikers, and that now they would proceed with their work, without any further attempt to placate them.
All of the old workers, the proclamation said, who desired their jobs back could get them upon application. Those placards remaining empty will now be filled up with new men.

COURT BIDS REAM
DISPROVE FRAUD

Former Wife's Demands for Proof Win Trial Hearing.

Louis Marshall Ream, who inherited a sixth of the $5,000,000 estate of his father, Norman B. Ream, must furnish proof in court that the annulment of his marriage to Eleanor Pendleton Davidson was not obtained by fraud.

Judge Henry V. Borst, sitting in special term in Saratoga, N. Y., ruled today that effect yesterday upon motion of the young woman's attorneys. He set the trial for April 22 at Amsterdam.

The former Mrs. Ream is known on the stage, where she used to appear in the chorus and small parts in musical comedies, as Eleanor Pendleton. She alleges she consented to the annulment for her young husband that the justice who performed the marriage ceremony in Hoboken on September 1, 1911, was acting without authority. She later learned, she says, that the marriage was legal.

Lindley M. Garrison represented Ream at yesterday's proceedings before Judge Borst. He confined his argument to the contention that the present proceedings were brought without legal justification, because ex-Senator Brackett, Mrs. Ream's counsel, served the papers on J. Norris Miller, who represented Ream in the annulment proceedings. He contended they should have been served on the lawyers who are now representing Ream.

WANAMAKER HAS SCHOOL IN STORE

Trade University to Help Workers Get Education Opens in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, April 8.—A new university for the boy or girl who either had to leave school or could not afford to go to college was dedicated here this afternoon in the John Wanamaker store. Joseph H. Appel, vice-president of the board of trustees of the American University of Trade and Applied Commerce, said in formally opening the university halls and class rooms:

"One-fourth of our children of school age are at work without technical school training or adequate general education."

"Less than one-fourth of our adults are receiving education in our higher schools, colleges and universities."
"Out of these conditions has grown the American University of Trade and Applied Commerce, chartered by the courts of Philadelphia, under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, whose meaning, purpose, aims, methods and ideals we are now presenting."

Mr. Appel said that from 1900 to 1914 world commerce increased by $20, to fit people to work and to live with one another for mutual service."

As part of its obligation to society the John Wanamaker store established times as great as the total world commerce at the beginning of the last century.

"Measuring this huge volume of commerce among the people of the world not in terms of material wealth but in terms of human activity," he continued, "the twentieth century so far must clearly be considered as an age of service—one man cooperating with another. And because it is an age of service, there arise new and vital problems of labor and education which must be met and solved through the wisdom of our day."

"The first demand of this age of service is that our boys and girls going into life be fitted for useful, efficient employment. The American University of Trade and Applied Commerce aims
one another for mutual service."

As part of its obligation to society
the John Wanamaker store established this university. Mr. Appel said, "offering to its adult employees the opportunity of continuing their education while earning their own livelihood, so that they may become better individuals, better members of society and better citizens of the nation. It will provide education technical to the job; education for health, for vigor of body and mind; education for thrift and good financial standing; education for higher ethical and social standards of living; and education for culture and wise use of leisure."

Firm to Honor Read's Memory.

The funeral services of the late William A. Read, banker, will be held at the Church of the Incarnation, Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, Monday morning, at 10 o'clock. The offices of the firm in this city, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and London will be closed on that day until noon.
